

Smith Environmental Internet Assistance

The value of the Internet in penetrating additional markets both residential and commercial is obvious. SEP is currently well positioned to take advantage of the current trends. However, the reality that a significant dealer network, that also has a professional on-line presence will not only be beneficial for the individual dealers but for the group as a whole.

So for those in attendance at the 2003 conference, Smith Environmental is willing to subsidize a portion of the development costs associated with the creation of a network of dealer websites, each with a professional display of our varied energy saving products and services.
